

the morning flies find lazy paths in the wind with a fatalism before bothering us.
i believe the washerwoman on the border river squatting to urinate
may need a poem between revolutions.

but there are times when there is no substitute for shell casings and powder.

fatalism.
wf.h 2010