

almost all the moral foundations include
a fear of falling into the abyss.
it is always there. this abyss.
that abyss.
the collective abyss
the personal abyss
seen.
unseen.
foreboding.
imminent dark dark chaos.

i think you should be more worried about what you might choose as a filler if you are going to try and fill it up so you will not sink as you cross or your engineering skills and whether the structural design for the weight bearing capacity is sufficient to handle the full weight of your morals and transgressions.

my problem always leads to condemnation...
what is the point of an abyss in the first place.
is this just creation with bad design
a rounding error
of morality with precipitous truncations.

the abyss.
