

there is no world where things are fair or good for everyone.

some of us are born the wrong way or in the wrong place or in things that just go wrong as they go wrong.

and even if some part of the world is better for most or getting better for more there is some remainder of those who do not get their fair share...

i believe poetry and the arts

do not reconcile the differences but i believe they will not walk away until they are.

the differences.
