

asking the night park bench young lovers in their gordian knot what in the world did they think they were doing in such a public display quickly moving from affection to something much more
            not even looking up
                one of them whispered... finding out.

the new world and age of exploration.
