

this is not a world where things are fair
things are good for everyone.

some of us are born the wrong way

some of us are in the wrong place or things just go wrong while they are going on.

and the meaning of wrong is always changing.

even if

part of the world is better for most or getting better for more there is some remainder left who are not part of that world.

life will never reconcile this difference its only promise is not to walk too far away.

this is not a world.
